

The Fraudulent Issue of Indiana Bonds
TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

They noted another article in the Herald, and other papers, upon the Indiana State frauds, which contains the following:—

Governor Morton, whose frequent visits to the East have been chiefly to prosecute the work of recovering these illegal securities, had at first strongly insisted upon an immediate exposure of the whole fraud, but yielded to the suggestions of the District Attorney, A. Oakley Hall, and the Attorney General of New York, Daniel S. Clark, who have attempted to state them, and consented to a suppression of the affair.

I know not what suggestions Mr. Hall may have made in the premises, nor what advice he may have given; but, so far as the statement relates to myself, it is essentially untrue. In January last, when prosecuting the case of homicide, the People against Merritt, in the City Hall, and when actually engaged in the trial, two gentlemen came into the bar and introduced themselves to me as the Governor and Attorney General of Indiana, and told that they wished to see and consult with me touching a very grave criminal offence, which, upon inquiry, I learned was the fraudulent issue of State stocks of Indiana. I could not leave the trial in which I was engaged, nor could I agree freely with them there, and, therefore, I agreed to see them only by proxy, and they, accordingly, they left. We had but a few moments' conversation. No names or details were given by them, nor did I give any. I was, however, told that they were at the Hall, and I was to consult with him when opportunity afforded. On the same day I received a note from Governor Harrison, asking me to call on him, and, in answer, I was requesting me to see Mr. Hall upon the subject, and adding that it was desirable the whole matter should reach a State seal for the present. I therefore trusted that I could see him, and, accordingly, I called on him, leaving the city, but, finding him engaged, left, and had no interview with him. This is all I know of the matter, and I have no doubt that the Governor, whether either deferred or suppressed, nor anything of the kind, nor did I learn enough about it to form an opinion what action ought to be taken.

Daring Burglary in the Fourth Ward.
AN IRON SAFE BORED INTO—NEARLY $4,000 ABSTRACTED—HOW IT WAS DONE—ARREST OF THE

DETECTIVES RECOVERED THE REMAINS, MR. BLAIR, of the Fourth Ward committee, said that the police officers it would have proved a very lucky hit for the knights of the file and bit. The details of the remarkable chapter in the annals of crime are as follows.—Mr. H. J. Wright, the agent of the New Haven Steamship Company, locked up his office, which was situated in the second story of the building on the northwest corner of Front street, about nine o'clock on Saturday night, and proceeded to his residence uptown. He returned again on special business about ten o'clock, unlocked the front door, and, on reaching the door on the second story, heard some peculiar sounds from the office which he had just locked. He was at work on the safe. He returned to the street as quickly and quietly as possible, where he found roundman Blair, of the Fourth precinct, to whom he communicated his suspicions. Now, Mr. Blair not only keeps a vigilant eye on all who violate the sanctity of the law, but also on the newspapers containing the news of the day, and he had, fortunately, that day read the telegrams published by Governor Andrus which he received from Secretary Stanton. So, knowing that really in search of them, and not strike the alarm rap. He soon found officers Mullen and Murphy, of the same precinct, who were on duty, and he pointed out the place to the retreat of the burglars in the rear. This manœuvre was accomplished by making a detour through a cracker bakery next door. Additional reinforcements were sent to the rear, and the officers proceeded to make a reconnaissance on the enemy's front. The first of his defenses they came up to was at the front door, which was locked. The key was in the lock. The obstacle was overcome by one of the officers forcing the key out with his knife, when they entered the room. The burglars were in the position. The being done they advanced up stairs, and found the enemy had evacuated the place. They found that the safe had been bored through, and its contents

So, knowing that really in search of them, and not strike the alarm rap. He soon found officers Mullen and Murphy, of the same precinct, and they proceeded to the rear of the building to cut off the retreat of the burglars in the rear. This manœuvre was accomplished by making a detour through a cracker bakery next door. Additional reinforcements were sent to the rear of the building, and the police to make a reconnaissance on the enemy's front. The first of his defenses they came up to was at the front door, where they found a key in the lock. The obstacle was overcome by one of the officers forcing the key out with his knife, when they entered the building. The burglars were in the room. The being done they advanced up stairs, and found the enemy had evacuated the place. They found that the safe had been bored through, and its contents had skinned up stairs, and accordingly led his forces in pursuit, himself acting as skirmisher, armed with his .45. He was not far from the rear of the group, and the enemy were to be seen, so officer Blair pushed on up to the fourth or upper story, where, covering the rear, he saw a number of men, some of whom suspicious-looking individuals were found, who were of city ilk, and the officer thought they supposed they were being taken for a ride, and they were not about to attempt to gain any self-evident proposition. Finding their efforts were rather silent, the two captives took to the stairs, and the officer, who had been told that all but only told officer Blair that they would give him $2,600 to let them walk quietly out. The officer was not to be taken in, and he told them that he did not see what could be done. They took him down stairs on to the third floor, and showed him how they had secreted the money in the wall, and he took the money and inserted the notes between the sacking and the column. The total amount was $3,662, in bills from $1 to $100, on banks of this city. The officer then took them to the stairs and locked up until very morning, when they were brought before Justice Brennan for examination. They were taken to the jail, where they were kept in the cell of Dan Brady, and James Nesbitt, who is an old offender, and has already served a term of five years in the State prison. Nesbitt is a new hand, and is a very good looking fellow, and is a very good looking young man. He is a remarkably good looking young to know, about thirty-five years of age, and six feet in height, with a dark complexion, black hair, and that they stored into the safe in about forty minutes. Kelly said he had had the idea of robbing the company for some time, but that he had not been able to do so until now, when he saw it stated in the papers that the company generally kept about ten thousand dollars in their safe, in the shape of bonds and cash.

He stated that they would have got clear off with their booty but for the vigilance of the patrolman on that beat. They looked out of the front window and saw the patrolman coming, and that they fled into their neighborhood. Both the prisoners looked on it as a very "bale" sort of transaction, which was only true as a matter of fact, for the only thing that was found in the safe was a very few tools, which were found lying on the floor by the side of the safe. The prisoners were committed to the county jail.

ANOTHER EXTENSIVE BURGLARY.

The store of Ott & Co., 405 Broadway, was entered about midnight on Friday, and robbed of silks, satins, laces, etc., the amount of about $1,500. The loot above, occupied by E. Roland, was also altered and robbed of dress suits to the value of about $1,000. There were two private watchmen paid by these firms, besides the regular police patrol, and it is quite possible that such an agent of goods could be removed without observation, especially as the store is on the main street of the city.

Our Willimantic Correspondence.
WILLIMANTIC, WINDHAM CO., CONN. May 28 1882

The factory is not, as has been stated, located at the village of Mansfield, but at Eagle Village, two miles this side. Though I believe, it is in the township of Mansfield, though I am not positive in reference to that point. The village of Mansfield is eight miles, by railroad, north of this place, and on the Willamantic river. It is composed of a cotton and silk factory, a dozen or fifteen houses, two stores and a railroad depot, but no tavern. Eagle Village, which receives its name, I dare say, from the Eagle Manufacturing Company, is two miles this side of the village of Mansfield, and six miles from Willamantic by railroad. It is not a village of so much importance as Mansfield. There is only one store, eight or nine houses and the Eagle factory. The railroad company do not consider it of enough importance to place a switch there or have a turnout, and never stop unless they are fagged. The Tribune Eagle Company's factory is, in fact, all there is to the place, and that is, in reality, but little else than a farm. For several years there was a factory located there for the manufacture of printing cloth, operated by the Eagle Manufacturing Company. The building in which this was carried on was destroyed by fire last year, and during the fall another building was erected on the same site to be run by the same water power, which is as good as the general average of water powers on the Williams river above this place. The new building is three story and a basement, about fifty by seventy-five feet. The basement walls are of stone and the balance wood, regular frame and clapboard built. It is enclosed, and has received one coat of white paint—just enough to give it a decent like appearance that well befits the inside, which is empty and barren, having nothing in it that looks like machinery would give a person the least idea that anything was to be manufactured there. The only piece of machinery in the whole structure is a large iron water wheel, aside from which there is not a pulley, pulley, belting rod, belting, or a tool of any kind except a few iron rods, building. Standing as it does, near the railroad track, it is a strange room can be seen from the car windows as the train passes, looking more like a rustic farmhouse than

The Eagle Manufacturing Company, like the Trueman Association, is a stock concern. The stock is held by several parties in Norwich and in New York City. While they all are it is as impossible to tell as it is who are the shareholders in the Trueman. The principal manager, and, in fact, the man of the concern, is Albert Almy, of Norwich, who has business connections in New York, and also a brother there. His word in the Eagle Company is law and gospel. Soon after the contract was awarded to the company by the government for manufacturing twenty-five thousand guns of the Springfield pattern, they commenced repairing the company's buildings and dwelling houses, and placing everything in readiness for active operations. It was reported that the machinery for their manufacturing was contracted for, and would soon be put in place. But the general belief in this quarter now is that no guns will be made there, at least for six months to come. At present there is nothing should indicate that the guns are to be made there. All was silent and solemn; no sound to break the solitude, except, the roar of the water as it falls a few feet over the falls. The silence was broken by the voice of the witness, who, few persons pretend to assert that the contract has been cancelled since the repose by the Congressional investigation; while others assert—and make, with their assertion, the fact of the repose—that the contract was not cancelled. The influence that secured the contract to this Tribune Engine-manufacturing Company from Secretary Cameron has obtained an extension of Mr. Stanton's term two years in the future. The contract was made in the year 1862, and it is stated in this place, but place no reliance whatever upon the fact. From the best information that I can obtain, the facts are about as follows: The contract was originally ordered for twenty-five thousand guns—a portion to be delivered in June or July and the balance in the fall. At first it was the intention to purchase the machinery in England, but when it was found that the machinery in time was found a difficult task. An arrangement was made—at least so say those who were in a position to know—with Mr. Mason, I believe, or Mr. Stanton, to purchase the machinery in this country, and a contract for guns, which he was at work on, and in the agreement it was understood that the Tribune Engine Company should put machinery into their estab-

Mr. Mason's contract as well as their own; but since no machinery has been put in there are no indications that the Truevine Eagle Manufacturing Company are carrying on any business. It is not known whether the company are being exclusively under the control of Mr. Almy—as the Washington hotel business of the concern is under the control of Wilkison, and the New York work in the manufacture of the barrels is under the control of Mr. Mason. It is not known whether any large scale of sale arrangements for the manufacture of the barrels that are not known by the curious and impulsive public. The same parties from whom oil is obtained for the manufacture of the barrels are sold in different places, given out by the piecemeal to whomsoever would take them; and that Mr. New Mason is moving his gun barrels and other articles from New York, and that the barrels are made by different parties, perhaps somewhere in New York, under the eye of the Truevine Association. It also is stated by those connected with the concern that the barrels are sold in all parts of the country for forty thousand markets, making, in all, a set of sixty five thousand that the Truevine Eagle Manufacturing Company have obtained from the government. With reference to the Secretary of the concern, Mr. Almy, the Secretary of the concern I have no means of judging. Suffice it to say, that all of those interested in the company defend Secretary Cameron or Secretary Stanton, although not in so positive and marked a form. The time given the company to fill the second contract may have given rise to the impression that the company was to be given the right to the original contract for one and two years.

I am unable to say whether the factory will really be in operation or not, but from all appearances, I judge that it will not be unless for the second contract. If they fill the first contract at all, it will have to be done by giving the job out to Lem, Dick and Harry—whoever will make the best use of the time. I have no doubt that there will be no guns furnished this summer that have been made by the Eagle Manufacturing Company. In fact, the whole thing looks like a decided job—one of those things that will be done by the best of the matter—that parties had obtained for the purpose of selling out to those with whom they could make the best terms. If the company have time enough allotted them on the second contract, they will be able to get on with their factory, but it is an impossibility for them to place the necessary machinery in their building and fill either of the contracts this year. The time given to the company is only a very small one, and it really for operations, even if it was on the spot now, would occupy their time until after the guns are to be

As far as I can learn the Tristram editors have no interest in the company; but the shareholders of the Tristram Company do not deny that they, Wilkinson and other writers of the Tristram, are interested in the contract. On the contrary, all who have conversed with those who are interested in the Eagle Gun Manufacturing Company, and who are interested in the Tristram, have a decided interest in the contract. How many, or who they all are, you can probably better judge from the report of the Congressional Committee than I can, looking at the matter from a distance. I am sure, however, that the whole thing is a job, and that the Tristram Eagle Gun Manufacturing is one of the hangups of the war. Certainly, no person who will take the trouble of going to the Tristram to inquire into the facts, can come to any other conclusion.

Smalley delivered a decision of great importance today in the case of Wheeler & Wilson and Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Co. vs. the American Sewing Machine Co. The agent for the sale of the Williams & Orvis machines in the city, as the plaintiff alleged, was ordered to issue, retaining the further sale of the American Sewing Machine Co. in the city, but a direct infringement of the complainants' patents.

The case was severely contested, and occupied several days of the morning session. The American Sewing Machine Co. were represented by Mr. Whiting, of Boston, the Williams & Orvis by Mr. O'Brien, of New York, and the Grover & Baker by Mr. Smith, of New York. The American Sewing Machine Co. were in defense, all of which were disposed of, and the case was adjourned to the 10th inst.

Persons using the W. Williams & Orvis machines are infringers as well as those who make or sell it.
